Youth Politics and Development in context of Nepal

Deependra Joshi | MBM 1st Semester

Youth is the period between childhood and adulthood. According to United Nations youth are the people between the ages of 15-24. The government of Nepal defines youth between the ages of 16-40(<http://un.info.np/Net/NeoDocs/View/1275>). But if we see the trends in Nepal this age group people are mostly attracted towards the foreign nation for study and employment. There's a quote by Mahatma Gandhi "Be the change you want to see in the world". The quote can relate to the youth as youth can be the changes who want to see the world change. Youth are full of energy and they can be drive towards anything's as per the need of nation. Many leaders say that the success of leader and nation depends upon how they utilize the youth in politics and development.

Youth, Politics and Development is a buzz word today every people speak in every forum. Today many political leaders say that today's youth are not interested in politics but why this is happening no one has tried to give answer. Probably its due to the frustration of people that they are not getting chance to lead even they have done something's. No political parties have recognized and given chance to youth in their political parties in top post so they can lead and attract other youth. During the present local election Ranju Darsana of Bibeksheel Party become the youngest youth to stand in election but no major political parties has given opportunity to youth to stand and fight in election. Then how can be youth attracted towards politics. If the question is asked to leaders, they say that we are also youth. But it I think definition of youth should be revised by government of Nepal and age bar should be reduced to 28-30. As in Nepal at Tribhuvan university where most student study, student can fight at Free Student Election (FSU) only and until they are 28 yrs. So, to relate to this definition of youth should be revised. It will help youth to attract in politics one the one hand and on the other hand it also forces government and political leader to provide chance to youth in their parties.

As youth are full of energy they can be used in development of Nations. Many developed countries have set the examples how they can utilize youth in development. In Nepal more than fifteen hundred youth are going outside the nation daily for foreign employment (<https://thehimalayantimes.com/kathmandu/number-of-nepali-youths-leaving-for-foreign-job-destinations-on-the-rise/>). If government can stop only fifty percent of this youth and attract then in nation building, they can play the vital role in socio-economic development of Nation. Sixit Bhatta of Tottle, Rohit Tiwari of Food Mario, Faija Parween of open space network are some name who are doing innovative business and contributing the nation. Mahabir Pun is working in the sector of Science and Technology who wants to establish National Innovation Centre which will attract Nepalese youth scientist. If government contributes little budget and provide subsidy other youth can do various activities. In terai we have fertile land that has not been utilized properly and government should try to attract youth in this sector and country can be export it product agricultural product also. Without government support we can't even imagine about youth involvement in development work so there should better policy and budget to attract youth with proper working environment.

In conclusion we can say that youth politics and development are interrelated. If there is involvement of youth in politics, they can play role in policy level and attract youth which ultimately ends with the pace of development. If we really want to see Happy Nepali, Prosperous Nepal there should be good involvement of youth in politics and development.

MOVIE REVIEW | THE PLATFORM

Sanjila Shrestha, BBA, 5th Semester

The Platform is a Spanish science-fiction horror-thriller film, directed by Galder Gaztelu-Urrutia and released in 2019. The concept of the movie is quite impressive and clever. Entire film takes place in a jail like place simply termed as “The Hole”, which consists of 333 floors and 2 persons per hole. Every day, a platform with a lot of food descends through a large hole in the middle of the building, and it’s only one chance for food for entire day. It holds in at one floor for only two minutes the prisoners have to eat as much as they can within two minutes and cannot keep any food with them after that. The prisoner at level one, have access to a feast with lot of varieties of food. The people at the successive lower floor have to eat food left from successive top-level people. If everyone only ate small amount of food, it could make it all the way to bottom with something for each prisoner. But it never happens. The main character of the film is Goreng, who volunteered to enter the prison to quit smoking. Every prisoner was allowed to take only one thing with them which may be sword, knife, rope and anything they want. In case of Goreng he took book with him. He entered the hole without properly understanding it. His first cell mate who was a old man explain him about the process of hole, however later on he have to kill that old man. He was in level 48 at that time. The level changes every month. The more one goes to lower level it's harder for survival because one had to feed on the left overs from the upper level. Eventually food will be less and less leading to no food left for people at lower level. This caused the serious conflict at the lower level there will be brutal battle for food and survival. For the survival the prisoners killed their own cell mates and eat their body for the month, even if the body gets rotten. And this reflects how the hunger changes a rational human being into dangerous animal.

The movie is the clear reflection of our society. It mainly emphasis on the social hierarchy, social inequality, struggle of survival, social dynamics and so on prevailing in our society. The movie focuses on the idea unequal distribution of resources and power are root cause of conflicts. The social parable is clear – if the haves didn't take more than they needed, there would be enough for have nots. The film evilest part and most clever part was idea of changing floors every month because all the prisoner has equal probability to be in higher or in lower floor. One can be on 8th floor one month and then on 148th floor next month. But whoever comes to upper floor their mentality of superiority always leads to take more food than needed causing less food left for lower levels.

This movie is suspenseful, dramatic and somehow horror simply the reflection of our selfish world. It has multiple impressive twists given in its limited setting, and each of them casts a new light on aspects of our society. This movie is now on Netflix for millions of people to watch. It is really a good movie to watch especially during quarantine days.

The essence of knowledge lies in a spirit of creative thinking, expression and experimentation. And in this regard the “Weekly Digital Magazine” by Saraswati Business Society has played a vital role as a platform for the students to think, reflect, create and innovate in a multitude of ways. The magazine is indeed a precious document that preserves the words and vision of our talented students as budding writers and thinkers. It is a significant milestone in their creative journeys and inspires them to aspire higher. In today’s world where we are constantly surrounded by events of social unrest, pandemic per say, and our constant struggle to cope up with the changes brought by it; namely online classes, it is of the utmost importance that students explore issues that extend beyond their curriculum and classroom. Literature is one of the most powerful media through which they can engage with the world meaningfully and creatively. It is a holistic art generated by introspection and retrospection, by self-questioning and a desire to seek answers, by imagination and a deeper understanding of realities.

Universities and colleges are places of understanding and analyzing the world around us. Only then can we hope to change this world. As socially aware and alert citizens, we all must be committed to educate in order to encourage, to inspire, guide; and above all, to teach and learn to respect humanity regardless of religion, caste, gender and class. The weekly digital magazine is and will be a space for students to express their ideas, opinions, imagination, concerns, questions, creativity, doubts, thoughts, feelings, views, visions, dreams and goals.

Congratulations to the Principal, Program Coordinators and the Editorial team for providing this space to express my feelings. As the Assistant Campus Chief of SMC, I extend my full support to all endeavors aimed for the advancement of this magazine.

Answer From our last week question

Question

What are the career challenges for students, teachers and other people in academic field due to COVID-19 pandemic?

Swastika Timsina, BBA 5th Semester

Over the past few weeks, the corona virus disease 2019 (covid-19) has marched relentlessly. WHO has clearly recommended lockdown for almost all the countries. Inevitably, the wave of this pandemic has hit not only in the world's economy but also in the career of student's teachers and lot of other people in the academic field. Academic session extended making pass out time far. This pandemic and lockdown have affected results due to untimely exams and no proper classes. A huge rift in enthusiasm about study and career due to mental effect on student's mind. Teachers and their careers are being equally affected due to this pandemic. Teacher's professional growth are shattered and postponed. No classes make them less motivated about their profession. Many businesses get closed and job cut off so many people will lose their job. Many businesses get closed due to slow operations and so many people will lose their job. Students will less likely to get job than past after they pass out. Due to lockdown many people including teachers may not be paid this time. Many job holders may not get their payroll increase or maybe decrease due to economic problems in their organizations. Students willing to abroad for study and job will have to wait long for appropriate time. This pandemic has hampered not only economic status but also the social and academic status of many students and teachers. It is very challenging to the academic institutions to get back to the normal state again.

Anil Adhikari, BBA 3rd Semester

COVID-19, an extremely dangerous and threatening word for today's people, can affect to every sectors of development including academic sectors. Most of the developed, developing as well as underdeveloped countries are in lockdown situation. All the schools, University, colleges and all the academic institutions are closed. COVID-19 itself is an incredibly challenging for whole world in every sector but if we have to specialize some career challenges in academic field due to this pandemic, then there are some long-term challenges as well. Firstly, months of lockdown is wasting the valuable time of learning age of students. Some are waiting for new session to start and running session to end. This will occur long term effect in students' career by wasting their golden time of learning age. In short, these days will be black days for students who are facing this situation. Except students, the other parties related to academic field i.e. teachers, educational institutions, etc. will have short term problems. Teachers will face lack of income; institution will face loss in business, but it will not hit hard to their careers except to the students. The main and only confront to students and teachers due to this pandemic is loss of time, the most valuable thing in the world. But by the advanced technology most of the organizations are providing online classes and other source of education. But not all the students are able to get this facility. At gist, the influence of the pandemic is doze either of large or small population. Stay Safe! Thank you!

Q&A with Ruchi Khewa Limbu

Ruchi Khewa Limbu, is a BBM Student of Saraswati Multiple Campus who like to study, dance and travel also she is serving as spokesperson in Saraswati Business Society. Here we have asked some question to her about her experience and moment being in Business Society.

➤ Share some experience being in SBS?

As a board member of Saraswati business society, I have a lot of amazing experiences. I improved my communication and leadership skills by interacting with other members and by giving presentations in workshops. I got chance to learn new things and wonderful experiences working in a team.

➤ Do you think business society like SBS can help you to be practical?

Yes, club like SBS whose objective is to work as a bridge between theoretical and practical knowledge helps to be practical. Here we learn to invest in share markets and further imaginary bank can be formed to understand about banks.

➤ Any best moment in SBS yet?

Being the part of SBS is my best thing. but talking about the moment, every meetings, workshop and programs in SBS are best moment for me. These moments are best because of the people I worked with and all others members of SBS.

➤ How are you contributing to this business society?

Talking about contribution, I am the spokesperson in this club. I take part as well as assist other members in all the programs and workshops. I also provide necessary information about the club to audience and facilitate new members.

➤ Any message to those who are willing to be part of SBS?

SBS has always been a great platform to flourish ourselves. I sure you all will be benefited as you get chance to improve your skills and show your creativity here. We as well as I warmly welcome to all the willing students of Saraswati Multiple Campus faculty of management to be the part of SBS.

➤ Following the social media trend which one do you prefer playing Ludo or using Tiktok in free time during this lockdown?

I Prefer playing Ludo rather than using Tiktok as playing games is one of my hobbies.

EDITOR'S WORD

Dear Readers,

You may be thinking this is just another awareness message for corona virus and you are not completely wrong but this is also an update regarding how the counties with female leaders seem to have resolved this problem.

Currently, the world is fighting with this novel Coronavirus and almost all country around the world are in complete or partial lockdown ever since. The powerful countries with powerful political leaders seem of having no control over this deadly virus what so ever the death count is increasing in rapid phase. The highest deaths are recorded in very developed nations like United States, Spain, Italy, United Kingdom and France. But if we compare it with the countries like New Zealand, Germany, Taiwan and Iceland which is led by female leaders the cases regarding the virus seem to normalize quicker. Why is it so? Why are female leaders handling this crisis so well? Because it's so difficult for women to get into office in the first place, said Abigail Post, an assistant professor of national security and political science at Anderson University in Indiana. She also mentioned "They are often just better leaders and are often perceived to be soft or weak during crisis which makes them more likely to be decisive and firm."

Women seems to have very unique leadership tactic that we're more likely to see from a man leader. Taiwan with the population of 24 million people claims to have just 395 coronavirus cases and 6 deaths. Don't you think that's impressive? We are not asking for more women in charge here but domestic public should surely shift its attitude towards female leaders in order for them to be effective. We should support and expect more female leaders running the government, offices & businesses. We believe in female potential, as we all know how good we are being guided by our Female President here in SBS.

Looking at our own country we have been in complete lockdown for more than a month and we can predict the government will extend the lockdown since number of cases are increasing. Well, it may not be possible to full extent as well but we should try to remain positive & calm. It would be great if we keep ourselves busy and make our day productive. Well, it's not having to be studying for whole day or working in your PC to make your day productive. You can just meditate, exercise, learn to cook, learn new skills, or simply try to learn more about yourself. Knowing yourself more make you happier and you are more likely to succeed.

Lastly, we want to thank all our readers and all content contributors. So far, we are receiving supports and wishes from you all, and we expect the same in coming future too. We have added this section where we will be sharing our thoughts and opinion on contemporary issues. We hope you will enjoy this too.
